CRRC 2019

14th Corporate Responsibility Research Conference

Theme: Rethinking Value Creation for Sustainability

Hosted by the Business 2 Nature (B2N) Research Group, Tampere University in association with the Sustainability Research Institute at the University of Leeds (UK)
and Kedge Business School (France)

12th–13th September 2019
(PhD workshop on afternoon of 11th September)

The conference theme ‘Rethinking Value Creation for Sustainability’ invites us to challenge our understandings of value and value creation. The focus of the conference is on the ways business and other organisations provide solutions to the current sustainability challenges. In private and public organisations and other institutions, value is created in novel ways that may not yet be fully apprehended or conceptualised by research. Thus, the focus of the conference is on those activities and practices that precede the current theoretical conceptualisations of value creation for sustainability in and around organisations. We seek contributions address the idea of rethinking value creation for sustainability from both theoretical and practical perspectives.

Acknowledging a broad range of sustainability challenges, we call for papers that may address, but are not limited to the following questions and topics: How to rethink the purpose of the firm? How can organisations contribute to sustainability challenges? How can sustainability be incorporated in business models? How can value be created in stakeholder networks? How to overcome trade-offs between ecological, social and economic value? How can theoretical conceptualisations accelerate change for sustainability? What kind of methodologies are needed for examining value creation? How to overcome the challenges of crossdisciplinary research for sustainability? How can researchers interact with organisations to accelerate sustainable value creation?

This crossdisciplinary conference is looking for conceptual and empirical papers filling the research and knowledge gap in both theory and practice related to sustainable value creation. We are interested in contributions from the different disciplines and fields of study. CRRC is the ideal place to test new ideas and to experiment with new formats. Therefore, we welcome suggestions for special workshop streams and innovative ideas. The tradition of CRRC is to focus on participants and the debate, as well as on social activity. We aim to create an environment that is welcoming and friendly, yet succeeds in challenging the existing knowledge base and assumptions, and hence drives the debate around corporate responsibility forward.

We invite submissions addressing the following sub-themes and to the open call:
